Welcome to the third and very special edition of the Embassy Agri newsletter. This edition contains two parts; firstly the embassy has introduced two team members heading instrumental departments, i.e. the Economic Affairs and Agriculture. Secondly, this will be the last Agri only newsletter following the decision to combine the Embassy economic and the Agri newsletter to a more robust and streamlined single channel from the Embassy. It is however our outmost wish to continue sharing quality developments, updates and information from the Embassy in the new format.

This newsletter presents key updates on sustainable agriculture and food production focusing on the plan my team and I have envisioned for the coming years, youth participation in agriculture, the visit of UNSGA special advocate HM Queen Maxima on digital inclusion, how to go circular in agriculture and much more!

Latest Developments

New generation of horticultural entrepreneurs

In Tanzania, the youth accounts for the majority share of the population. Each year, more than 1 million young people graduate from tertiary education. However, not all students will access formal jobs, a good number of graduates are left unemployed. On the other hand, the horticultural sector presents a lot of potential for the youth.

The future is circular!

The growing human population in the World has led not only to an increase demand for food production, but also to an increase of organic waste emission. The persistent increase in organic waste is regarded as an emerging threat to human health and to biodiversity and ecosystems.

A circular economy, in which raw materials are used and reused more effectively, offers a better -balanced global economic growth and ample opportunities for innovation and business worldwide.
